Deceased and injured in the July 1-2, 2022 events in Karakalpakstan (analysis and lists)

Unofficial translation

02.07.2023 Updated version

This report has been produced as part of an investigation into events occurring in Karakalpakstan, conducted by Freedom for Eurasia (Austria) in collaboration with human rights defenders from other countries. The report presents official lists of the deceased and injured for the first time and examines the accuracy of information provided by law enforcement agencies during trial proceedings in Uzbekistan regarding the victims.

Report author: Vitaly Ponomarev¹, expert on Central Asia, "Freedom for Eurasia" (Austria)

Project coordinator Leila Nazgul Seiitbek

Material was collected and prepared by the human rights defenders Galym Ageleuov (Kazakhstan) and Dmitry Kabak (Kyrgyzstan) who made two missions to Uzbekistan and Karakalpakstan to collect evidence and testimonies.

The report was prepared with support of Karakalpak activists living inside Karakalpakstan and in exile, who must remain anonymous for their own safety and security.

There are still many gaps in the information regarding the number of casualties during the events in Karakalpakstan on July 1-2, 2022.

The initial public discourse, which gained traction on social networks and in the media, eventually stalled due to challenges in obtaining further information. However, in February 2023, human rights activists succeeded in obtaining a 662-page verdict in the case of 22 rioters, which included comprehensive lists of the deceased and injured during the events.² Our review, titled 'Incidents in Karakalpakstan: Official Lists of the Dead and Wounded and as well as Discussion on the Number of Victims,' was published on February 25, 2023, presenting a preliminary analysis of these materials and comparing them with other available data.³ The study uncovered significant discrepancies in the information provided by different security agencies in Uzbekistan, as well as undisclosed victims and other inquiries directed at the country's official authorities regarding the events in question.

These concerns were detailed in a letter sent on February 26, 2023 by the human rights organization Freedom for Eurasia (Austria) to the parliamentary commission responsible for investigating the events in Karakalpakstan, led by Feruza Eshmatova, the Ombudswoman of the Republic of Uzbekistan. Members of the commission acknowledged receiving the request; however, as of June 30, 2023, no response had been generated. It appears that the concerns raised by human rights activists regarding the victims in Karakalpakstan posed a challenge to the official authorities in Tashkent, who claim to be "open" and "ready for dialogue."

In late January to early February 2023, Kazakh human rights defender Galym Ageleuov traveled to Uzbekistan and Karakalpakstan, where he conducted interviews with relatives of the victims and convicts. During his visit, he managed to obtain documents and materials related to the "victims of July," including a list of 78 civilians who sought medical assistance from the healthcare authorities of the Republic of Karakalpakstan. At the time of the aforementioned February review publication, the processing of these materials was still ongoing. In May 2023, Galym Ageleuov had planned his next mission to Tashkent, where the Supreme Court of Uzbekistan was hearing appeals in the case of the 22 rioters. However, on May 22, when he tried to check in for his Bishkek-Tashkent flight, he was informed that he was indefinitely barred from entering Uzbekistan.

Despite the Uzbek authorities' efforts to restrict access to information, in May 2023, we managed to obtain the text of another 268-page verdict, which included lists of the deceased and injured. These lists contained new data that differed in some aspects from the materials found in the verdict on the "Case of 22". We were able to gather additional information with the help of relatives of the deceased and convicted participants of the events, and Karakalpak activists residing abroad.

Today's publication of the lists of the deceased and injured is the result of analyzing materials from various documentary sources and, when needed, supplementing them with unofficial data.

Official list of the deceased

The initial figures regarding the casualties were provided by representatives of the Prosecutor General's Office and the National Guard of Uzbekistan in July 2022. During a briefing at the Agency for Information and Mass Communications in Tashkent on July 4, officials stated that 18 individuals had lost their lives in the riots. Two weeks later, prosecutors announced that three more individuals died in hospital from their wounds. The number 21 is still being mentioned in the media, despite the materials of the criminal case containing data about only 19 deaths. Law enforcement authorities classify all the deceased as "participants in the mass riots."

The statements made by the Command of the National Guard of Uzbekistan and the Commandant's Office regarding the deaths of four law enforcement officers, which have not been officially refuted, are not supported by the materials of the criminal case. None of the members of the law enforcement agencies of Uzbekistan involved in maintaining public order in Karakalpakstan died during the events of July 1-2, 2022. The controversial claim made by the commander of the National Guard of Uzbekistan, Rustam Dzhuraev, that out of the 14 civilians killed, 13 were allegedly under the influence of alcohol and narcotics, has also not been substantiated or confirmed.

The official list of the deceased, initially provided in our February publication, was derived from the text of the verdict in the "Case 22" (referred to as P-0123). This list aligns completely with the list obtained from the second verdict available to us in the case of A. Sagidullayev and N. Urazbayev (referred to as P-0523). Both lists contain full names (surname, first name, and patronymic), year of birth, date and location of injury, as well as the date and identification number of the forensic medical examination report for each deceased individual.

The information provided is supplemented by additional sources, including unofficial death lists, private reports, medical documents, photographs of tombstones, and other available evidence related to individual cases.

The updated version of the official list of the 19 deceased individuals is provided in Annex 1. The names of the deceased have been arranged in alphabetical order for clarity. According to the Uzbek law enforcement authorities, all of them reportedly took part in mass disturbances (i.e. illegal violent actions) and, sustained injuries during their unlawful actions, subsequently died as a result. Authorities claim that there were no civilians among the deceased.

Let us reiterate some of the conclusions and observations presented in our February publication.

All those deceased were adult men aged between 25 and 52. Only one (Bakhadyr Dzhaksimuratov, a member of the opposition Alga Karakalpakstan party) was fatally wounded on July 01, 2022, outside Jokargy Kenes (parliament) of the Republic of Karakalpakstan; the others were killed or wounded in various districts of Nukus on July 02.

The largest number of fatalities, six, occurred in the area between the airport and the Shorsha Baba cemetery. Five people were fatally wounded near the police station of Nukus. Two deceased on the Amu Darya bridge between Nukus and Khojeyli district and near the Jokargy Kenes building, one near Koskol 1, by the Ministry of Internal Affairs detention facility (for administrative detainees), another near the Sanitary-Epidemiological Welfare and Public Health Service and one near the Sarancha bridge (over the Kattagar channel).

The information regarding the deaths, particularly those near the Shorsha Baba cemetery and the City Police Department in Nukus, is supported by eyewitness testimonies obtained by the author during interviews conducted in the latter part of 2022.

15 According to the provided information, there were at least two casualties on the evening of July 1 near the Jokargy Kenes building, five casualties near the City Police Department building on July 2, at least ten casualties near the Shorsha Baba cemetery that evening (excluding the victims of a truck crash involving a group of rioters in the same area), several casualties near the bridge connecting Nukus with the Khojeli district, and at least one casualty in the Koskol district of Nukus, among other locations.
The official materials provide no specific information regarding the causes of death for the 19 individuals. However, when compared to unofficial sources, it becomes apparent that at least 15 (and possibly all) of the deceased individuals lost their lives due to the use of firearms or non-lethals employed by government forces.\textsuperscript{16}

While in many cases, the official materials do not explicitly mention the location of the forensic examinations, it is reasonable to assume that most of them were conducted in Nukus, however, at least one examination determining the causes of death\textsuperscript{17} took place in the Khojeli district.

As mentioned earlier, there were no reports of law enforcement officers among the deceased. However, Aman Sagidullaev, a Karakalpak opposition activist residing in Norway, claims that one of the deceased individuals, Akhmad Turdimuratov, was a member of the Uzbek State Security Service. He was on leave during the incidents and sustained a gunshot wound in Nukus on July 02, which resulted in his death on July 11 in a Tashkent hospital. Karakalpak opposition activists allege that Turdimuratov "defected to the people" during the protests, and the investigation materials mention him as a participant in the mass rally.\textsuperscript{18}

A comparison of the "list of 19" with unofficial materials reveals that the official list includes the names of three previously unknown victims (No.7, 14 and 18), but at the same time omits the names of some of the deceased.

For instance, it does not mention the case of Nukus resident Alisher Daribayev, who suffered a fatal bullet wound on July 02, 2022, near Svetlana market when he went out to buy groceries. After his father complained in September, Daribayev's body was exhumed and the family later received material assistance from state authorities. The case of Daribayev was previously reported in the August 2022 report by the Open Dialog Foundation, and we have copies of the medical report and death certificate. The fact that this case is not included in the official list of the deceased raises questions and appears puzzling. It is worth noting here that the fact of Alisher Daribayev's name appearing in the "group of 22" investigation materials as a rally participant\textsuperscript{19} contradicts his father's account of his son's death.

The number of deaths reported by Uzbek officials in July 2022 was met with skepticism by the people of Karakalpakstan, as well as by journalists and experts familiar with the region. There is still a widespread belief that the Uzbek authorities are attempting to downplay the true scale of the tragedy, including the number of casualties. Unofficial estimates, which are often based on rumors and internet posts, vary widely, ranging from several dozen to as high as 200 or more, and even reaching the sensational figures of 1000-2000! These numbers, however, lack a clear source and are largely speculative in nature.

Among the data based on specific sources, there is a reference to a report by Azamat Atadzhanov, the editor-in-chief of the online newspaper Gazeta.uz, according to whom "on July 2 at approximately 23:00, Gazeta.uz was informed by the Karakalpak branch of the Republican Scientific Centre for Emergency Medical Care (RSCEMC) of about 77 dead and 114 injured within a 24-hour period". The newspaper's source in the Ministry of Health of Karakalpakstan "confirmed that the figures reported at the time were close to the truth" and even expressed surprise at the underreporting of the death toll by the prosecutor's office.\textsuperscript{20} However, a year later, there is still no reliable information regarding the names of a significant number of the deceased and the locations of their burials.

\textsuperscript{16} In contrast, only two members of the units involved in suppressing the unrest sustained gunshot wounds. The available materials do not provide information about whose hands the weapons were in that caused these injuries.

In November 2022, Aman Sagidullaev, a Karakalpak dissident residing in Norway, provided human rights activists with a list of 16 locations where he claimed that weapons were used resulting in human casualties.\textsuperscript{21} However, it is important to note that in conflict zones like these, eyewitnesses may report casualties even in cases where demonstrators sustain non-fatal injuries.

In the immediate aftermath of the unrest on July 1-2, 2022, residents of Karakalpakstan frequently shared information about civilian casualties with foreign activists via messaging platforms. These messages often included details such as names, ages, locations, and times of injuries. However, the reliability of these messages varied, and it was challenging to contact the senders for further clarification. Moreover, discrepancies in names and important details were observed. While additional information was obtained for some of these cases at a later stage, the information received for others remains unconfirmed or questionable.

Relying on the influx of unofficial reports and information foreign human rights activists prepared and published two lists about a month after the events in Karakalpakstan.

In early August 2022, the Open Dialog Foundation, a Polish-registered organization headed by Lyudmila Kozlovskaya, published a report on the events in Karakalpakstan. The report, prepared by a coalition of human rights organizations primarily associated with civil society in Kazakhstan,\textsuperscript{22} included an attachment containing a list of deceased.\textsuperscript{23} The list comprised the names of 18 people who lost their lives due to the use of force against protesters in Nukus, as well as two victims of torture.

12 out of the 18 names listed in the Open Dialog Foundation report can be found in the official list of the deceased.\textsuperscript{24} In the case of the remaining six individuals, one of them, Alisher Daribayev, has documented evidence. Another name, Yermanbay Kaipov, is included in the official list of rioters who sustained minor injuries.\textsuperscript{25} The names of the other individuals cannot be found among the approximately 2,000 participants of the July events listed in the verdict. Further investigation, including checking two addresses in Nukus provided by the Open Dialog Foundation as the residences of Abusattar Akmaliev and Umbet/Ummat Makhambetov, did not yield any results.\textsuperscript{26}

The second list was compiled and published by the author of this report on July 25, 2022, using information provided by Karakalpak activists affiliated with Alga Karakalpakstan.\textsuperscript{27} The initial version of the list contained the names of 34 individuals who had died (this figure, referenced to the author, was later mentioned in the HRW report).\textsuperscript{28} 33 died due to the use of weapons and restraints, while one died as a result of torture. Only 9 out of the 33 names were included in the official list of the deceased. It was later discovered that two of them were mistakenly included in the list of the deceased (both were arrested and faced trial), and there is conflicting information regarding the fate of one individual. Three individuals from the list are mentioned in the official lists of the wounded, and another four are included among those identified as "participants in the mass riots" in the verdicts. The presence of these names in multiple contexts allows for different interpretations. Additional information was obtained later for some cases, but for many, it was not possible to verify the original information and clarify their status.

In the months that followed, reports emerged from Karakalpak activists, as well as from relatives and friends of the deceased, revealing additional cases of civilian deaths that were previously unknown. Some of these cases came to light after human rights activists visited Karakalpakstan in late 2022 and early 2023.

In November 2022, unofficial lists of the deceased were compiled within a Freedom for Eurasia (Austria) organized project. Although the consolidated list was not made public, it served as a working document for human rights defenders. In February, Freedom for Eurasia sent a list of 31 names that were missing from the official list to a parliamentary commission established by the Uzbek authorities and led by the ombudswoman, requesting clarification on these cases. However, as of late June 2023, no response has been received from the commission.

Currently, the consolidated list, which has been updated with new information, contains the names of 34 individuals who are missing from the official list of the deceased (see Annex 2). However, many of these cases still require further verification. There are indications suggesting that this list may still not be exhaustive.

According to the Uzbek law enforcement authorities, all deaths related to the suppression of unrest in Karakalpakstan on 1-2 July 2022 occurred in Nukus. In July 2022, a source from Alga Karakalpakstan reported that two individuals from the RGC Nauryz were killed near an industrial building in the Kanlykol district on July 02. Multiple sources confirm the use of weapons against the demonstrators in that area. However, according to the official version, these incidents resulted in injuries rather than civilian fatalities. The names and surnames of the wounded individuals do not match those mentioned in the Alga Karakalpakstan report, nor the official list of participants in the unrest in the Kanlykol district as established by the investigation. Therefore, the information requires further verification.

Upon verification, other unofficial reports of deaths during sweep operations and detentions in July 2022 outside Nukus (for example, in the Shymbai district) were not confirmed.

In some cases, the discrepancy between the official and unofficial lists of the deceased can be attributed to differences in the methodology used to record the victims. In particular, the unofficial lists of the dead (unlike the official ones) include the names of two friends of the protest leader Dauletmurat Tazhimuratov - Madiyar Orazbayev and Ruslan Ibragimov, who died of torture after being detained in early July 2022. Their deaths were mentioned in Tazhimuratov's court testimony and have been corroborated by multiple sources. Currently, human rights organizations do not possess any additional information regarding individuals who died as a result of torture in relation to the investigation into the unrest in Karakalpakstan.

There are also concerns regarding the large number of casualties during the events near the Shorsha Baba cemetery on July 2, 2022. It remains unclear whether all the deceased individuals, whose bodies were taken away by the protesters, have been officially registered. Eyewitnesses have made claims that several people lost their lives as a result of security forces opening fire.

Official information regarding individuals who may have been subjected to enforced disappearances during the July events is completely inaccessible. In July 2022, a representative from the General Prosecutor's Office of Uzbekistan criticized the data provided by the Open Dialog Foundation, which reported 58 protesters as "disappeared" (a number that later increased to 90 by

The Prosecutor's Office claimed that some individuals mentioned in the shared list were actually at home, while others had left the country, and some did not exist at all. During the investigation into the July events, many individuals who were arrested or administratively detained were held incommunicado (some as late as September 2022), and their relatives were often unaware of their detention. This lack of information and communication may have contributed to the complaints about disappearances during that period. Additionally, due to the fear of arrest and torture, many of those who participated in the events, left the country. However, despite the persistent rumors of extrajudicial killings, the authorities have not provided a clear statement regarding the individuals who went missing during the July unrest in Karakalpakstan. Official statistics regarding missing persons remain unavailable. Unfortunately, a parliamentary commission established by the authorities has chosen to ignore questions regarding potential cases of enforced disappearances that were raised in a letter sent by Freedom for Eurasia in February 2023.

Meanwhile, rumors of extrajudicial executions continue to circulate widely in Karakalpakstan. Some of these include the discovery of over 10 bodies with tied hands at the bottom near the Kyzketken bridge in Nukus in early August 2022, as well as reports of an informal mass burial in a desert area north of the highway to Khorezm Province. However, these reports require thorough verification to establish their accuracy and validity.

In December 2022, an "independent commission" established by the Uzbek authorities submitted a request to the Prosecutor's Office, urging “transparency in providing information on matters of public concern”, such as number of deaths and causes of death in each case. In response the General Prosecutor's Office of Uzbekistan stated that “the list of 19 individuals who died during the mass riots and the causes of their deaths would be examined individually during open court sessions”.

In December 2022, the authorities announced that the criminal case related “to the use of weapons and non-lethals during the events in Nukus on July 1-2 and the subsequent detention of individuals” had been transferred to a separate investigation. Investigation is currently ongoing on the deaths of two individuals. In February 2023, following another statement from the U.S. regarding the importance of ensuring transparency and holding accountable any law enforcement officials who violated the laws of Uzbekistan, the General Prosecutor's Office of Uzbekistan announced that a criminal case had been opened against three law enforcement officers for misconduct related to the events in Nukus. These officers were subsequently taken into custody.\textsuperscript{39} The details surrounding the situation remain unknown. However, it is evident that there is a significant disproportion between the number of civilian casualties and injuries and the limited number of law enforcement officers being held accountable by the authorities, potentially due to international pressure.

Uzbek authorities have consistently disregarded unofficial information regarding the victims. Along with denial of accounts of torture of detained protesters,\textsuperscript{40} this undermines their credibility. Given the significance of July events, the only way to ascertain the truth is through the publication of comprehensive lists of casualties, thorough investigations into every unofficial report of death or disappearance, and the examination of information regarding possible mass gravesites. It is crucial that the investigation into the events in Karakalpakstan involves the active participation of Karakalpak activists and reputable human rights defenders. In order to ensure transparency and accountability, there should be an open dialogue between state institutions and civil society in Karakalpakstan. Currently, there seems to be a reluctance from Uzbekistan's state authorities to engage in dialogue with Karakalpak activists, and any such calls are viewed as "extremism." Instead, an "independent parliamentary commission" dependent on the authorities has been assigned to handle the matter. However, this commission has been hesitant to provide clear and independent answers to the questions raised.

\textit{Official lists of wounded}

The official lists of the wounded are documented in the two verdicts issued by the Court of the Republic of Karakalpakstan, as mentioned earlier. These verdicts, written in the Karakalpak language, were accessible for study.\textsuperscript{41}

Both verdicts provided detailed information on the wounded individuals, including their last name, first name, patronymic, year of birth, severity of the injury, and the date and number of the forensic medical examination report. Additionally, for members of the security forces, their position and diagnosis were noted, while civilian victims, who were stated not to have participated in the riots according to the official version, also had their diagnosis specified. In the first verdict (P-0123), the date and place of injury are mentioned specifically for the "participants of mass riots," whereas in the second verdict (P-0523), this information is provided for all three groups of victims, as well as the exact dates of birth added for all the wounded.

The wounded in both verdicts are categorized into three groups: 1) law enforcement officers and servicemen involved in maintaining public order, 2) participants in the "mass riots,"\textsuperscript{42} and 3) civilians who did not participate in the riots. The order of the names of the injured is the same in both verdicts. Within each group, however, the names of the injured individuals are not listed in any particular order.

When comparing the lists from the two verdicts, several discrepancies can be identified. For instance, in P-0523, the severity of injuries for three demonstrators is changed from light to heavy. The names of four victims, who were drivers from other regions of Uzbekistan and were attacked on highways in two regions of Karakalpakstan, are excluded. Additionally, there are minor differences in the spelling of names and the location of injuries. Furthermore, two wounded "law enforcers" are mistakenly included in the list twice.

\textsuperscript{42} Throughout the investigation into the events that took place in Karakalpakstan in July 2022, it appears that charges of participation in mass disorder, specifically group violence, were frequently brought without substantial evidence. In some cases, individuals were charged solely based on their participation in an unsanctioned rally.

However, more serious concerns arise when attempting to compare the information from the lists of the wounded with the data presented in the chronology of events outlined in the verdicts, as well as the testimonies of the victims (only a summary of which is available in one of the court decisions). As it was discovered, there were instances where the dates and locations of injuries mentioned in the chronology of events did not always align with those indicated in the list of the wounded. During their testimonies in court, victims frequently mixed up the dates of July 1st and 2nd, the numbers of checkpoints, and the geographical locations, which sometimes significantly differed from the information provided in other sections of the verdict. We have made notes highlighting some of these discrepancies, although not all of them in Annex 3. Furthermore, additional challenges arise from the inconsistent designation of the same event locations within the text of verdict. Even the references provided in the lists of the wounded are not standardized. Moreover, the lists fail to account for situations mentioned by certain victims, wherein they were injured multiple times in different locations on separate days.

When examining the sources mentioned above, it was discovered that over 20 individuals who testified in court about sustaining bodily injuries are inexplicably missing from the list of the wounded. For example, the chronology mentions that on July 2, 2022, participants of the mass unrest in the Kanlykol district caused bodily injuries to M.S., a member of the National Guard, who also appeared in court as a victim and spoke about his injury. However, his name is not included in the list of victims, but rather mentioned as a participant in the July 1, 2022 unrest in Nukus. There are numerous other similar discrepancies found within the verdicts, and resolving these puzzles exceeds the scope of our current study.

An evident observation is the lack of mention of the reasons for the injuries, including fatal, of the "rioters" in both verdicts. The official chronology only documents the use of violence against "law enforcement officers" and civilians authorities consider unrelated to riots. It is difficult to interpret in any other way than a deliberate effort by Uzbek law enforcement agencies to conceal the circumstances and extent of the use of lethal weapons against demonstrators in Karakalpakstan. The verdicts deliberately avoid addressing the question of when and by whom these weapons were used, as well as who issued the corresponding orders.

Another document we examined is the "Information about the citizens injured as a result of mass disorders in the Republic of Karakalpakstan on July 1-2, 2022" (referred to as I-0223). It presents a table written in Uzbek, presumably compiled by the health authorities of the Republic of Karakalpakstan. The file was obtained by human rights activist Galym Ageleuov in early February 2023 during a field trip to the region. The document provides details about 78 victims, including their surnames, first names, patronymics, dates of birth. Additionally, for 76 of them, information is provided on education, ethnicity, employment status, marital status, place of work, residential address, and for some, even passport numbers. The file also contains notes about medical examinations and observations conducted at various healthcare institutions in Karakalpakstan.

The document contains information for less than half of the individuals listed in the official record of civilians injured during the street unrest in Karakalpakstan on July 1-2, 2022. It is possible that the document does not include the names of detained individuals. For instance, the document does not mention convict S.K., who underwent a leg amputation in Nukus after being wounded on July 2, 2022. However, the file omits to include names of the majority of victims who were not involved in the riots. Additionally, it provides information about 10 individuals not listed as victims in the two available verdicts. Two of them are among the rioters mentioned in the verdicts.

We further analyze the data from the aforementioned sources and compare them with each other, as well as with the figures that were published in the media based on the information provided by the law enforcement agencies of Uzbekistan.

On July 4, 2022, at a briefing in Tashkent, officials stated that 18 people were killed and 243 were injured during the unrest, including 38 law enforcement officers. It was mentioned that 149 of the injured individuals received first aid and were released to return home, while 94 people with more severe injuries were being treated in hospitals. The head of the National Guard press service, Davron Zhumanazarov, stated that there were serious injuries among the guardsmen, including one with a gunshot wound. On July 18, 2022, during another briefing, a spokesperson from the Uzbek Prosecutor General's Office announced that "three more people died" while in serious condition. Among the 274 people who sought medical assistance, 16 remained hospitalized. The victims were identified as 141 law enforcement officers who sustained bodily injuries and 16 citizens who experienced harm to their health and property.

When comparing the figures provided by the Prosecutor's Office in mid-July 2022 with our estimates based on the official list of the wounded in P-0523 (excluding the 19 dead but including 4 civilians from P-0123 who were not involved in the disturbances), it is evident that the total number of casualties mentioned in the verdict is over a quarter higher than the figure reported by the Prosecutor's Office.

According to official records, 10 women and girls sustained injuries during the unrest in Nukus. Among them, two were severely wounded, two were moderately wounded, and six had minor injuries (among the latter were two girls born in 2013 and 2017). Six of these women were found to be "participants in the mass unrest" as a result of the investigation.

Additionally, among the injured individuals in the capital of Karakalpakstan, there are five underage boys between the ages of 14 and 17, who were allegedly involved in the "mass disturbances."

The verdicts do not contain specific data regarding the ethnicity of the victims. However, based on the information from I-0223 file, we can make an estimation regarding the ethnic

How accurately do these numbers reflect the true situation?

It is common in such circumstances, after the suppression of street unrest, that injuries sustained by law enforcement officers are carefully documented, while protesters often refrain from seeking official medical treatment to avoid persecution. This can help explain why the number of injured law enforcement officers in the Prosecutor's Office documents increased from 38 (at the beginning of July) to 180. Simultaneously, the recorded appeals from civilians decreased from 205 to 164. It is possible that some individuals who sought medical assistance chose to leave Uzbekistan out of fear of arrest and torture. As a result, there are no forensic examinations available to support the inclusion of victims' names in the criminal case file. It is also known that some victims did not seek medical assistance at all. Unfortunately, the parliamentary commission established by the authorities of Uzbekistan has disregarded questions regarding the reasons for such decrease in the number of civilian victims in official documents.

Noteeworthy is the absence of certain names in the lists, such as Polat Shamshetov, a high-ranking official of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of Karakalpakstan, who later died in prison. According to the court proceedings, he was present at the scene of the events near Jokargy Kenes on July 1, 2022, while on vacation. After Polat Shamshetov returned to work in July 2022, he underwent an examination that confirmed an injury resulting from the use of non-lethals. Shortly after, he was accused of involvement in the mass riots. Shamshetov's name does not appear in the official lists of victims.

Above, we mentioned the missing names in the official list of the wounded, including both enforcement officers and protesters.

Thus, there is a reason to believe that the list of victims reproduced in the verdicts is incomplete and inaccurate, failing to reflect the actual number of victims. Based on our assessment, there could be a significant gap of dozens, and possibly hundreds, of names.

A significant disparity is evident in the number of seriously wounded individuals between the "security forces" and civilians, with the difference being nearly eightfold. When considering the number of fatalities, this gap increases to elevenfold. Such a gap is not observed in the figures for moderate injuries. The number of seriously wounded and deceased civilians is 4.5 times higher than the number of individuals with moderate injuries. These disparities strongly suggest the widespread use of lethal weapons against the demonstrators.

Let's take a closer look at the official casualty figures for July 1-2, 2022, in various areas of Nukus and beyond.

On July 1, a significant portion of the 42 injured "law enforcement officers" in the capital of Karakalpakstan sustained their injuries near the building of Jokargy Kenes (Parliament) of the Republic of Karakalpakstan. 17 individuals were injured near the Central Deyhan market (CDM), while 3 others were injured in different locations. Among the injured near the Jokargy Kenes building, 4 had moderate bodily injuries, and the remaining had minor injuries. No serious injuries were reported.

According to the official version, the number of demonstrators injured was reported to be half of the previous day's figure, but their injuries were more severe: a total of 23 people, 12 of them - near the CDB, 3 - near Jokargy Kenes, the rest - in 7 other locations in Nukus. Five people were severely injured (2 at the CDB, 1 at Jokargy Kenes, 1 at Karakalpakstan street and 1 in front of the bridge at the entrance to Nukus on Uzbekistan Avenue), 3 were moderately injured (2 at Jokargy Kenes, 1 at the Mega Nukus Trade Center).

Three civilians, who were not categorized as participants in the riots according to the official version, were also injured. One of them sustained minor injuries near the Central Deyhan market (CDM), another near the building of Jokargy Kenes, and a woman sustained moderate injuries near a store on G. Sherozit Street.

Thus, the highest number of victims with severe and moderate injuries occurred in the vicinity of the Parliament of the Republic of Karakalpakstan, where the actions of the law enforcement on the evening of July 1, 2022, resulted in the first casualties.

When comparing the data on casualties on July 1, 2022, it is apparent that the figures for injured demonstrators near the Jokargy Kenes (the epicenter of the clashes on the first day of the riots) are unrealistically low. It is likely that a significant number of civilian casualties were simply not accounted for in the official statistics.

The law enforcement officers themselves were also victims of the use of non-lethals in this area. According to the materials of the forensic examination presented in the verdict, National Guard officers I. Madrimov and Z. Khamroev suffered from damaged eardrums caused by nearby exploded grenades.

Numerous accounts of severe and moderate injuries were also reported in other locations in the city. This indicates the disproportionate use of various weapons by security forces against civilians on the evening of July 1.

Approximately 40% of the victims on the first day were heads of structural subdivisions of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the Republic of Karakalpakstan, including high-ranking officials such as Amanbay Orynbayev, the current head of the republic, and commanders of National Guard units. This raises suspicions that some of them may have rushed to be listed as "victims" after the events in order to demonstrate political loyalty to Tashkent.

On July 2, the scope of violence expanded significantly.

According to official figures, 113 law enforcement officers were wounded in the capital of Karakalpakstan, Nukus, and 25 were wounded in five administrative districts outside of Nukus.

In Nukus, more than half of the law enforcement officers (63 people) were injured near the 8th block-post on Kaniyazova Street, where demonstrators disarmed a large group of National Guard and Ministry of Defense soldiers on July 2. Another 15 security officers were injured near the 9th checkpoint on Zhakaltay Street, 10 near the special detention facility in the Kaskol-4 area, 5 near the Nukus Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies (former policy department), 5 near the UMS building on Uzbekistan Avenue, 3 near the Kattagar bridge on Khojaly highway, 3 near the international airport, and the rest in seven other locations. Of these, 5 people were severely injured (2 near the 8th checkpoint, 2 near the 9th checkpoint, and one near the Meredian restaurant), and 8 people were moderately injured (2 near the Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies, 2 near the 9th checkpoint, and one each near special detention facility, the international airport, the 27th microdistrict, and the 8th checkpoint).

Outside Nukus, 10 law enforcement officers were injured near the 1st checkpoint on the 1st kilometer of the Nukus-Shymbai highway (where protesters seized an APC-80 of the Defense Ministry), 9 near the 10th checkpoint in the Nukus district, 3 in the Kanlykol district, 2 in the Shomanai district, and 1 in the Takhtakopir district. At the 1st checkpoint, one serviceman was seriously wounded, 4 were moderately wounded and the rest slightly injured.

On the same day, 124 rioters were injured in Nukus and three were injured in Kanlykol district.
In the capital of Karakalpakstan, the majority of injuries (23 people) occurred in the area near the building of the Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies (former police department). Eighteen people were injured near the Shorsha Baba cemetery near the international airport, 17 near the Central Deyhan market, 9 in front of the entrance bridge on Uzbekistan Avenue, six near the National Guard Department, four each near the house of protest leader Dauletmurat Tazhimuratov, Tashkent Hotel, Central Maternity Hospital and Mega-Nukus Trade Centre, three each near the building of Jokargy Kenes and on P. Seitov street. The rest - in 25 other locations in the city.

Civilians with severe injuries (41 people, excluding the deceased) were admitted to medical institutions from 18 locations in Nukus, including 8 from the area of the Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies, 7 from the Shorsha Baba cemetery area, and 3 each from the areas in front of the entrance bridge on Uzbekistan Avenue and the National Guard Department building. Civilians with moderate injuries (10 people) were admitted from 7 locations, including 2 from the areas of the Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies, the Shorsha Baba cemetery, and the entrance bridge on Uzbekistan Avenue.

Outside of Nukus, according to official data, only three residents of the Kanlykol district were wounded, with one being severely injured, one moderately injured, and one lightly injured. During the trial of the "Case of 22," testimonies indicated that the security forces unit that arrived in the area opened fire on the demonstrators without warning.

As we can see, the largest number of injured law enforcement officers were at the 1st, 8th, 9th, and 10th checkpoints, which were disarmed by the demonstrators between 4 and 6 p.m. on July 2. There was minimal resistance from the law enforcement officers, as evidenced by the small number of injured demonstrators in these locations. Additionally, a relatively high number of law enforcement officers were wounded near the buildings of the Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies and the special detention facility of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, where the protesters attempted to release the detainees.

In terms of the number of injured participants in the unrest, including severe injuries, the areas of the Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies and the Shorsha Baba cemetery stand out significantly (also for the number of fatalities). According to eyewitness accounts a deadly shooting by security forces took place near the Shorsha Baba cemetery around 10 p.m. on July 2, as demonstrators attempted to break into the capital. This particular episode was the bloodiest among all the events that occurred in Karakalpakstan on July 1 and 2, 2022.

On July 2, 7 civilians, who were not considered participants in the unrest according to the official version, were wounded. 2 of them were injured near the building of the Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies, 2 were hit by a car near the Shorsha Baba cemetery, and 2 minor girls (sisters) who were playing in the street were also injured. Among these injuries, one was of moderate severity (near the building of the Department for Coordination of City Internal Affairs Bodies), while the rest were minor.

Outside of Nukus, 4 drivers from other regions of Uzbekistan sustained minor injuries when they were in transit and were attacked. One incident occurred on July 2 in the Kegeli District, and three incidents took place at 1 a.m. on July 3 in the Shomanai District.

Units of the National Guard, Interior Ministry, and Ministry of Defense, as well as officers of territorial law enforcement structures in Karakalpakstan, Tashkent, and other regions of Uzbekistan, were deployed to suppress the unrest.

By analyzing the list of victims, it is possible to compile a comprehensive list of the units and subunits that were involved in quelling the protests in Karakalpakstan and assess the losses incurred by these respective entities.²⁰

²⁰ Dislocation of the units has been clarified based on Internet search materials.

The table clearly indicates the prominent involvement of National Guard units from outside Karakalpakstan in quelling the unrest. The ethnic composition of these units differed considerably from the ethnic makeup of the areas where the defense of Karakalpakstan's sovereignty took place. This imbalance in the actions of the security forces exacerbated interethnic tensions and led the Karakalpak population to perceive Tashkent's actions through the lens of colonialism.
